DROWNED AT WASHOE.

Three Men Sink in the Waters of the Lake.

On Monday last, John Jones, Kelly and a man whose name is unknown, left Musgrove's ranch to fish at Washoe Lake, and have not since been seen.

The men had been living in a cabin on Musgrove's ranch all Winter, and were engaged by Musgrove to go to work on Tuesday.

They did not return from their fishing trip, and he spent two days riding about the valley in search of them.

Yesterday morning he stopped at the cabin of an Italian known as "Snippy," who said that he saw them drown in the lake on Monday. He claimed that they borrowed his boat and went out to the middle of the lake, where the water is 12 feet deep.

He saw the boat upset and for about three hours they clung to the boat and struggled in the water. Having no boat he could not go to their rescue, and they all went down. It is considered strange that the man made no report of the matter until yesterday, but he is an eccentric character and those that know say his conduct is in keeping with his character, while others do not believe the story at all. The absence of his boat corroborates his story, and Musgrove says that they have a stock of groceries and provisions at the cabin as well as wood-chopping and mining implements, and the way they left there indicates that they expected to return.

The man whose name he does not know, was a Virginia miner.

HARD EDITORIAL LINES. — The Wabaska Mangler of Friday says: Last week as the Mangler was going to press, Sol Noel's Holstein bull came charging into the office and demolished the forms so that we were unable to get the issue out until today. We are well aware of the fact that the Mangler in this section is a great annoyance to a good many men here who would like to run politics to suit themselves. We know for a fact that for some months past, Sol Noel and a lot of his conferees have been training the bull to charge into print shops. They rigged up an old cider press and fixed a lever on it so as to represent the Mangler press and a man would stand on the side and make motions as if running an ink roller over the forms. They would then flaunt a red flag in the bull's face and let him charge on the machine and knock it over. He would then be fed real hay as his reward for his success in demolishing an educational engine. They got the bull well in train and then sent it charging into our office with the above result. He went home with his hide filled with No. 8 shot and if any of the gang come here again they will be treated to something a little heavier. We will continue to publish the Mangler and show up political iniquity whenever it can be found. We will begin suit against Noel in the Justice Court tomorrow for back subscription and damages.

TEN IN A BOX.

How Chinese Bones are Shipped Home.

Yesterday old Ah Fong Wong, a sort of Chinese undertaker, called at the express office, with a long, coffin-shaped box, which he desired shipped to Hong Wong & Co., San Francisco. He billed the truck as "merchandise," and was quite pleased to find that he could slide the affair down to S. F. for about $10.

The box contained the bones of ten Chinaman, and they were on their way to the Flowery Kingdom.

All Chinamen expect, no matter where they are planted, to have their bones finally rest in the land of their nativity, and they don't care for the expense.

The parties whose ossifications were in the box had been dying at various intervals during several years past. They had not been very sociable in life, but they were right sociable there in the box together.

Ah Fo, the wealthy Chinese merchant, never spoke to Sam Hi Sic, the tan player and high-binder in real life, but now the thigh bone of one lay alongside the vertebra of the other, and their skulls lay side by side in a most affectionate manner. When alive, those two never spoke on the street.

To people who believe in class distinctions this style of business is not attractive.

Some of these corpses belonged to men of good moral standing, as Chinese morals go, yet there were the bones of a Chinese woman mixed up in the lot, who was a regular Aspasia in the town for ten years, and was not regarded as any too good when she first struck the country in 1860.

Here, indeed, was a social leveling, and no mistake.

We Americans are taught that the grave makes us all kin, that the silent city of the dead makes no caste distinctions of its inhabitants. But go out to the cemetery and look around.

There are people who live under marble tombs in the first ward and people who are huddled together under plain sand stone and rotting pine in the second.

The rich don't mix up with the poor to any considerable extent in the grave yard, if they can help it, and they generally can.

If you want the regular Simon pure social leveling that the poet sings of, you just die and have your bones packed in a box with the Chinamen.

The collector packs all the thigh bones in one bundle, all the forearms in another, fits pelvises together like lamp shades packed in a crate and strings the skulls on a wire.

Think of the jabbering ghosts at the resurrection, squabbling over the bones. Imagine such talk of this mingling with the trumpet notes of Gabriel playing the call to raise up in E flat.

One ghost says, "Here you thief, gimme my right arm or I'll mash your ear."

"Let me have my right leg and I'll go you."

"Where the duce is my lower jaw."

"See here partner, if these ribs belong to you, take 'em, they are several sizes too small for me."

"Miss Fong, will you be kind enough to kick my shoulder blades over this way and I'll let you have your neck."

This idea of packing ten people's bones in one box may be all right to save express charges, but its bound to result in confusion at some subsequent time.

We would rather have our own bones in a place all by themselves and not rise on the mutual co-operative plan.

CROWDING IN.

Men who Join Secret Societies for Political Purposes.

A few days ago a well known secret society man in this city said in conversation on the street:

"In political years there is always an increase of applications for membership to the secret societies. At least, it is the case with the one to which I belong."

"Many of these applicants are men who hope to use the society for political purposes. I always make it a point to black-ball a man who is on that lay. Sometimes, however, the members are not on their guard, and these parasites creep in."

"I have belonged to a secret society for years and I have run for office, but I never yet asked a man to vote for me because I could give him the right grip and pass-word."

"A man degrades his membership when he attempts to make his society a political lever. We are closely watching the men who are trying to enter our lodge this Summer. The man who never discovers any good in a secret order until he becomes a candidate for office is not the sort of a man we want, and you can bet we won't have him if we can help it. I think the line should be drawn tighter than it has been in these cases."

"I know men of many years standing in my lodge, whom I would favor for almost anything because they are brother members of my order. I would assist them politically in preference to other people, everything else being equal."

"But these men joined my order years ago, before they ever thought of office-seeking, and didn't squeeze in just before the campaign opened."

A Soap Bubble.

People with an apoplectic tendency, or people given to convulsions, would be wise in keeping away from the Third Avenue Theatre this week. Mr. Phister's "three act comedy," as the bill of the play unblushingly announces it is no comedy at all. It is a roaring farce, sprinkled with clever hits and imitations. The second act, which is devoted to the misteries and methods of a barber's shop, would make Bartholdi's statue of Liberty laugh, could she only be called down to see it. "Soap Bubble," is full of fun and mischief, and has a very congenial company.—N. Y. Daily Graphic.

George Hawkins has purchased Tobriner's cigar store, and will personally manage the business.

Sleepless nights, made miserable by that terrible cough Shiloh's Cure is the remedy for you.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.—Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used for children teething. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays the pain, cures wind colic and is the best remedy for diarrhoea. Twenty five cents a bottle.

COUGH! AND COUGH! AND COUGH! —What in the world is the reason you will cough and keep coughing and still keep trying inferior medicines when BEGG'S' CHERRY COUGH SYRUP will positively relieve your cough at once? This is no advertising scheme, but an actual fact, and we guarantee it. W. H. Chedie, Druggist.

HOW CAN PARENTS—Allow their children to cough and calmly say: "Oh! it's only a little cold," and keep giving them cheap medicines, until they are down with lung fever or consumption, when they can be so easily relieved by using BEGG'S' CHERRY COUGH SYRUP? It has no superior and few equals. W. H. Chedie, Druggist.

WHAT ON EARTH—Is the reason people will not, cannot, or do not see any difference in cheap nostrums put up by Cheap John houses or irresponsible parties at enormous profits, rather than take a medicine of world wide reputation and one that is giving universal satisfaction at equal price? No medicine in the world is giving such unparalleled satisfaction for purifying the blood as BEGG'S' BLOOD PURIFIER & BLOOD MAKER, and every bottle that does not do its work, will cost you nothing.—W. H. Chedie Druggist.
